

Rosie Perera

Rosie Perera is recognized as one of the core engineers behind Microsoft Word.

After joining the company in 1985, she was one of the original WinWord developers and created the code for Word's automatic Table of Contents. She was also responsible for a major upgrade to MS Money.

After leaving Microsoft in 1996, Rosie went to work on a masters degree in interdisciplinary studies from Regent College.